Headline:
Dry spells between spells of rainfall Thursday and Saturday.

This Evening and Tonight:
The evening starts of wet with persistent precipitation over most of the region, this continues through the night with the worst of any rainfall over any hills to the north. Weakening, and beginning to clear to the morning. Light winds. Minimum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Thursday:
Thursday morning rain continues but begins to fragment and clear southeast into the afternoon bringing with it a risk of some hill snow. Drier into the night, but remaining cloudy. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Cloudy and dry Friday, then rain and strong winds arrive westwards early on Saturday. Into the afternoon the rain clears, to give a dry day with sunny spells Sunday.
